WOMAN, 82, SON, 50, SLAIN, THEN HOME IS FIRED

Bandits Blamed for Double Murder Near Elkton, Md.

SHOTS ARE HEARD

Victims Were Known to Keep Money in House.

ELTONK, Md., Mar. 30.—Mrs. Anna Mahoney, 82, and her 50-year-old son, Edward, were shot and burned to death in their farmhouse near here early today.

Aroused by shots neighbors went to the Mahoney home when they saw the flames but the blaze was beyond their control and they were unable to reach the bodies.

Firemen and police officials agreed on the theory the couple had been killed by bandits and the house set afire to conceal the crime. Both Mrs. Mahoney and her bachelor son were known to keep large sums of money about their home.

No Frills, Says Hoover.
Strange Old Chinese.
Lamb Heels Up Again.
Billionaire Farmers.

By ARTHUR BRISBANE.

(Copyright, 1929, by King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

A GOVERNMENT without frills, run like an engineer's office, seems to be the Hoover plan. The president will not have military and naval aides to go with him where ever he goes, to prove that he is head of the army and navy.

HE IS going to abolish much of the handshaking. He might well abolish it all.

There's no reason why congressmen should have the right to bring their little droves of constituents to the White House, exhibiting the president to them, and compelling him to shake hands when he ought to be attending to business for which he was elected.

This promises to be strictly a business administration.

A VERY old Chinese statesman named Wu Tze-Hui was one of three that, on their word of honor, guaranteed the life and safety of Li Chai-Sun, governor of Canton.

Thursday Li Chai-Sun was executed by the Nationalists, in spite of the guarantee. The aged Wu Tze-Hui considered himself disgraced and killed himself, although he had nothing to do with the execution of the man guaranteed. Many Westerners will find it difficult to understand that suicide.

WALL Street is many things, but NOT dull.

Speculators that had been paying 20 per cent for borrowed money on Wednesday could borrow Thursday morning for 15 per cent and were quite happy. They almost thought "cheap money" had come back.

Later in the day they borrowed at 10, and then 8 per cent, and their childish joy knew no bounds.

LITTLE lamb heels went up in the air, and so did stock prices. Much talk filled the air, of mergers, distributions of stock, all the trimmings that go with the Wall Street table d'hote.

Plus signs all up and down the line.

THE Federal Reserve, which hasn't quite succeeded in creating the panic that it seems to desire, tells banks they mustn't make brokers' loans because their money is needed for "legitimate commercial customers." That is plain nonsense.

IF BANKERS could lend only on good commercial paper, they wouldn't lend much.

Commercial borrowing is not what it used to be. Ask any banker.

Great corporations, once heavy borrowers, have made so much money that they are now heavy lenders, competing with banks in the call money market.

Other corporations that need money

Selecting a winner at this stage of proceedings might well be left to the toss of a coin.

Ashland collegians continued in the running by defeating the East Liverpol "Y" five, 50 to 26.

Rader Hits Modern Cults.

"There is no objection which modernism makes to the Atonement or to any feature of Christianity that has not been made before," said Dr. Rader, who is head of the World Wide Christian Couriers and known as "the happiest Christian." "Now cults are constantly appearing which appeal to the support of people on the grounds that some new and striking discovery has been made in religion. But they mean little.

"With much sophistry and perversion of truth, the modernists lead people to the belief that their fathers were ignorant or misinformed and that it is time to leave the old moorings under the direction of a new pilot and a new chart. Invariably what purports to be new is found to be centuries old.

"WALL STREET WOLF" IS COMING

The rough and tumble stoker of "The Docks of New York" is now known as "The Wolf of Wall Street," polished stock manipulator of the New York stock exchange—maker and breaker of the market!

George Bancroft is the Wall Street financier in his latest all-talking Paramount production which opens at the Ceramic theater Monday for a three-day engagement.

Bancroft has one of the best roles of his entire career in this new picture. He, by natural force and dynamic power, gives his latest characterization a treatment that holds one in complete suspense throughout the running of the film. Bancroft alone could essay such a role.

The story is an original one prepared for the star by Doris Anderson, Paramount writer.

Rowland V. Lee, who recently directed Gary Cooper and Fay Wray in "The First Kiss," directed the star in his latest picture. Lee is noted for his knowledge of dramatic values.

Nancy Carroll and Arthur Rankin have the ingenue and juvenile leads respectively, with Baclaova and Paul Lukas supporting Bancroft in the more dramatic moments.

"GODLESS GIRL" COMES TO STATE

Youth is determined to have its fling—even in the movies! The modern young boy and girl have come in for their share of screen stories at the Pathe studio where three different motion pictures recently were filmed in which young men and women interpret the principal characters.

Cecil B. De Mille's personally directed production, "The Godless Girl," which comes to the State theater Monday, is a stirring drama of vibrant youth depicting conditions existing in reform schools and the strong tendency toward atheism among certain groups of persons of school age. The story is astoundingly daring in its treatment of problems that are agitating the younger folk of present day society. Lina Basquette, Marie Prevost, Noah Beery, George Duryea, Eddie Quillan and Kate Price portray the leading roles.

WILLIAM HAINES AT AMERICAN

William Haines, in the role of a prize fighter who goes to college, is the attraction which will be at the American theater, Monday, in "The Duke Steps Out," Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's vivid comedy romance with dialogue adapted from the Lucian Cary Saturday Evening Post story.

James Cruze, who directed Haines in "Excess Baggage" and "A Man's Man," directed the new play and the heroine is Joan Crawford, sensational hit of "Our Dancing Daughters," who last appeared opposite Haines in "West Point."

The story deals with the hilarious troubles of a prize fighter trying to hide his profession while attending college, and at the same time defends his title on the outside. Ringside thrills vie with comedy about a college campus in the new picture. A notable cast appears including Kali Dane, the famous "Slim" of "The Big Parade," Tenen Holtz, Eddie Nugent, Delmar Davies, Luke Cosgrove, and others of note.

Easter Celebration

With the passing of Lent at noon today—a 40-day period of fasting and penance in preparation for Easter—East Liverpool and the rest of the Christian world await the commemoration tomorrow of Christ's resurrection.

A glorious tone will supplant sadness, so marked during Holy Week, when the passion is noted, in all church services, irrespective of denominations. Joy over the resurrection will displace the sorrow that accompanied the meditations over the sufferings of Christ which culminated in His crucifixion. And there will be rejoicing in the great victory over death by the Man of Galilee who died to redeem the world.

Thus Easter, which, according to the Council of Nice, is always the first Sunday after the full moon that falls on or next after March 21, will be observed here with cantatas and special music, all in praise of the Lord.

This great church festival should appeal to all. Show your appreciation of the love, sacrifices and sufferings of the Master by attending services tomorrow in His honor.

Utilizing Farm Wastes

Chemistry, by its increasing conversion of agricultural surplus into raw materials demanded for manufacture into commercial products, offers a substantial means for increasing farm profits, Dr. Henry G. Knight, chief of the Bureau of Chemistry and Soils, United States Department of Agriculture, told the Ohio Chamber of Commerce. In such application of chemistry to the present problem of farm surplus, he says, lies the hope of preserving that proper balance between farming and manufacture which is everywhere recognized as the requisite for improving the present agricultural situation.

Dr. Knight reviewed the remarkable progress that has thus be. made in widening farm markets and outlined the possibilities for the increasing conversion of agricultural surpluses into material which can be profitably worked up for commercial uses.

"The farmer's business,' said Dr. Knight, "is more and more coming to be recognized as the production of the raw material for the use of manufacturing industries. The farm itself is coming to be recognized as a specialized factory and the farmer as a manufacturer whose raw materials are the minerals in his soil, the gases of the atmosphere and the rain and dew which through the life process, by use of solar energy as power, are converted into organic materials for the use of man."

Dr. Knight believes the logic of events points to a closer alliance between the farm factory and the city factory which will benefit both.

"The manufacture of hides into leather, of straw into paper, of potatoes into starch and of numerous other agricultural raw materials into industrial products constitutes a line of important chemical activities with which the farmer himself should have more than indirect relations,' he says.

Dr. K ights illustrated the widening utilization of farm by-products by citing the history of cottonseed which he descried as "a garage in 1860, a fertilizer in 1870, a cattlefeed in 1880 and a human food and many other things in 1890," and also by mentioning the more modern developments in the conversion of sugar cane bagasse into wall board, in making citric acid and pectin from citrus culls and the development of the numerous by-products of the meat industry.

Although for every pound of grain and cotton produced, he stated, there is left upon the farm from one to five pounds of residue, or an annual total of approximately 300,000,000 tons of crop residues for the United States, Dr. Knight expressed confidence that the chemist and agricultural engineer will steadily find new and profitable uses for this material in manufacturing industries.

Hoover Economy

The American public, that vast collection of fickle minded, hard-to-please and super critical humanity which is the backbone of the nation, will be pleased at President Hoover's attitude in ordering the presidential yacht, the Mayflower, to be decommissioned. It is done, according to the president, in order that officers and men on the pleasure boat may be released for naval service and to save the annual expenditure of $300,000 necessary to maintain the boat.

This is not a presidential gesture to tickle the public fancy and win votes. Neither is it an action that can be committed without danger of criticism. The Mayflower has been used by presidents as a pleasure yacht for 15 years. There will be some who will see in the president's action an unveiled rebuke to the actions of his immediate predecessors. It is not probable, however, that President Hoover has anything in mind except the immediate saving of money and the transfer of men and officers into regular service.

The tax-paying public will see reason to take heart, if a few considerate moves such as this are made by high public officials. Far too long, it has seemed that the only quarter of society which was expected to save was the quarter that provided the money for the officials to spend. It was a gross violation of the adage "Practice what you preach." The renunciation of an expensive presidential pleasure, supported by governmental appropriation, will cast off a bright glimmer of hope for the theoretical principles of democracy.

The sacrifice of the Mayflower is not a personal one. The president does not intend to do much traveling. It would have been unmitigated extravagance to support the yacht in idleness. Credit is due, because, instead of overlooking the expense and letting things go on in the same rut that they have been in, the president saw a chance to save money and saved it.

It is a short interval between the Easter bonnet and the straw hat.

Score another point for spelling bees. An Iowa couple recently celebrated the seventy-second anniversary of their wedding, having married a year after meeting each other en route to a spelling match early in 1856.

HASKIN DAILY LETTER

By Frederick J. Haskin

WASHINGTON, D. C., March 30.—A profound change has come over the character of the people in China who have come into contact with western people and western ideas, manners, and customs. According to Americans who have made a study of the new China, the most populous nation in the world is in a state of transition in which many of the most pleasing elements of the old life are absent while the new era is showing those raw edges and crudities which any new order of things displays.

The China with which the American or other foreigner comes in contact is the China of the treaty ports, the great sea coast cities where foreign nations have planted colonies of their own people and where they follow largely Occidental customs. Aside from the military stationed at such ports, the foreigners are chiefly of the trading class.

Before the war the ancient Chinese ways were followed. In China the merchants held a place of high honor. They were scarcely second to the nobility in social distinction. This arose from the fact that the word of a Chinese merchant was his bond. The honesty of these Chinese traders was proverbial. No written contracts were necessary; if a Chinese merchant entered into an agreement he carried it out to the letter as a matter of honor.

With the end of the war and the beginning of political turmoil in China the new order began to make itself felt. A war always stirs up the dregs of civilization and breeds a crop of adventurers. Such persons drifted to China in large numbers. China, of course, was not the only country they visited but China received its share; perhaps more than its share for the Celestial Kingdom seemed an easy mark. Shrewd and unscrupulous traders took advantage of the ancient and honorable customs of trade in China. A favorite game was the establishment of export houses dealing largely in antiques. As political conditions were disturbed and the soldiers were looting ancient palaces and temples, many priceless treasures were sold and, through the freshly-sprung export houses, found their way to rich American and European buyers.

These exporters—and by no means all were Americans—tricked the Chinese right and left. The Chinese is a natural imitator. It did not take long for the new generation to learn every British, French, American, and other trick. The old merchant princes were dying off and the new generation not only seized upon the Occidental tricks but, with Oriental cunning, improved upon them.

Today no bank will lend money to a Chinese without absolute security; no tract will be entered into without securities.

There is nothing at all astonishing in this. It is the story of trade in every new country and although in historical terms China is the oldest of countries, from the viewpoint of modern business it is the newest. Americans can not forget that in their early trading days they were the scorn of the world for what were known as "Yankee tricks."

An odd fact concerning the Chinese is his habit of petty theft. This does not apply to money. One can leave sums of money lying about the house and the servants will not touch a yen. But they will always take a few lumps of garo or small bits of other food easily carried. They seldom take entire objects but will take parts of mechanical things. A Chinese as likely as not will take the bell off the alarm clock while he would not dream of stealing the clock. Metal work will be taken off automobiles. Printing offices of the foreign language newspapers have a most embarrassing experience for the Chinese printer never leaves the shop without some type in their pockets. They have a special penchant for capital letters because they are larger and weigh more. This type, like all the other metal objects, is sold to the junk man by weight. The junk man sells the type back to the type founder who supplies the printing office. Thus the metal is kept in circulation but not infrequently a newspaper will find its cases bare of capital letters, and unless a careful check-up is kept, without enough type to get out an edition.

These manifestations are but a phase, however, and a short time is expected to see China taking a position of increased importance in her own right among the trading nations of the world.

NEW YORK Day By Day

By O. O. McIntyre.

NEW YORK, March 30.—There is no place quite like Broadway for picking fortunes — pss-st! like that! — out of thin air. Callings not rating three square meals a day at the short order restaurant back home produce coupon callouses among boys and girls, who in the vernacular, "work the main stem."

It is an old story how the Susskind brothers, three alert Jewish boys, conceived the idea of taking over hat checking privileges in cafes, hotels and theaters and thereby gained a monopoly that made them millionaires. Texas Guinan got hers "helloing" night club suckers.

Harry Richman, a second rate piano player with larded hair and a lisp, is in the big money because of deftness in making eyes at ladies while caroling sentimental ditties. Sophie Tucker can retire after 15 years of "hot mamma" songs in a coarse masculine voice. Helen Kane "boo-poop-a-dooped" to fame.

A table water salesman with the wide open spending manner of the old-time wine agent got himself a job on commission basis after prohibition. He had clerked in a haberdashery and is now nearing his first million. Selling out-of-town newspapers on prominent corners provides an ex-newsboy a limousine income.

Lou Holz, a quondam comedian, dabbled in real estate as a side venture, and owns a string of apartment houses and works on the stage when he feels like it. Sidewalk ticket speculator millionaires are numerous, and Joe Leblang's enormous realty holdings are from profits of cut-rate theater tickets.

The chain soft drink parlor magnates springing up since aridity rival the boys on the right side of General Motors. Three men are millionaires from incomes from racing form sheets. An itinerant jewelry salesman is wealthy selling installment plan baubles to chorus girls.

Frank V. Storrs, a Social Registerite with a box at the opera, began his fortune furnishing programs free to theaters and collecting on the advertising end. A former stableman has grown prosperous searching for pedi greed dogs abroad for the rich. And, of course, there is Miss Peggy Joyce.

There may be a more amusing want ad, than that of the young man seeking a position who naively states "at present employed at city hall but will work if I have to," but this want ad. reading hound has never seen it.

The gambling house—such as Canfield's—has long ago vanished. The new type is conducted by gamblers with portable apparatus carried in a suit case. In this way they move from hotel to hotel and foil raiders. At sundown the cryer for the game drops around to various haunts of gamblers and tips them off to the rendezvous for the night. Only those known to be "right" receive the information, and rarely is there a raid.

The longest session at poker recorded this winter took place at a midtown hotel. It began Sunday evening before midnight and lasted until Wednesday noon. The players only dropped out for cat naps, and not one left the table. It brought on a spell of yawning just hearing about it.

One of the sinister and persistent rumors from the underworld concerns a hotel on the fringe of the Tenderloin that is the reputed "depot" for upper world drug traffic. There is the story of an innocent middle western lady stopping at the hotel. Her phone rang. A feminine voice said: "Have you got the stuff? This is Alice in Room 407." The lady did not know what it was all about and said so. An hour later a knock at her door revealed a white-faced girl who quickly stepped inside flourishing a revolver. "Listen," she said, "I called the wrong room. Forget what I said to you. Remember Dot King was bumped off for blabbing." She vanished. And the lady took the next train for back yonder where people are a little more "folksey."

An automat worker got even the other day. His job was preparing sandwiches for the slots. Discharged, he inserted what looked suspiciously like a strip from the northeast section of a red undershirt between two slices of bread. A ham sandwich investor got it and was he mad!

Someone postcards anonymously: "You're going to keep on yapping at gyp night clubs until one of their gorillas gives you a punch in the puss."

I fear you not, Richard Knatchbull!

By Dr. Royal S. Copeland.

This season is the season when we should like to think of lighter food as well as lighter clothing. It may be we have had many a meal of buckwheat cakes, pork gravy, spareribs and all the fixings of substantial breakfasts. All our meals in Winter are likely to be pretty heavy.

Perhaps that is why we get "spring fever." We think it is the season, when, as a matter of fact, the symptoms are the natural effect of the diet we have followed.

Fortunately for us, modern methods of refrigeration and express trains, fast steamers and even the airplane, are placing at our disposal the fresh things of the whole world. Even in the country districts, the automobile has shortened the distance to markets where fresh fruits and vegetables can be found.

In olden times the men on sailing vessels, taking long voyages, had scurvy. That old-fashioned disease is old-fashioned indeed. But almost every ancient ailment has its modern counterpart. It is not likely to be precisely the same, but it is near enough like it to be recognized as of the same family.

In these latter days we have not what might be described as "hidden scurvy." It is not bold and crude, but it has a way of producing uncomfortable symptoms of obscure origin. In this sense it is certainly "hidden," as to cause.

You will see children who are listless, easily tired, unable to study, irritable and even positively lazy. Such symptoms are not unusual in the early Spring.

They are not confined to children by any means. They enter into the life of adults, too. If you have these symptoms, even though you are president of a railroad, or a member of the congress, it may be that you have Spring fever from a like cause.

Loss of appetite, feeling of wanting to quit work, unaccustomed mental dullness, bad temper, faded complexion, headache, sore joints—all these are symptoms of what I have called hidden scurvy. Every one of them may come from faulty diet.

In the early Spring, more perhaps than at any other season of the year, you need foods that contain Vitamin C. This is the agent that prevents and cures scurvey, old-fashioned or more modern. You should eat the foods containining it.

In the fruits and green vegetables we find the element that is good for you in the Springtime. Cabbage, spinach, lettuce, young carrots, rhubarb and potatoes supply it. Apples, berries, tomatoes and particularly the citrus fruits like the orange, are what you need.

Don't wait to get Spring fever. Begin now to reduce your intake of the solid, substantial Winter foods and give your body the trent of a lighter, Springtime diet.

Other Editors Say

Senator Coolidge?

The Poston Transcript gives three reasons why "suasion or force" should be used to nominate Calvin Coolidge for the senate in 1930, as successor to Senator Gillett. They are that Mr. Coolidge needs a job, that Massachusetts needs him and that he is his party's only hope in an off year when "any one of at least three Democrats could easily enter the contest with excellent prospects of victory." The second of these reasons would seem to be sufficient, although Massachusetts would not alone benefit. The country needs Mr. Coolidge and a lot more like him in the senate as much as his adopted state does.

Any state in the union would be honored by opening a seat for Calvin Coolidge. This is not because he has been president; but because of the kind of president he has been. The qualities that preeminently fitted him for the White House are sadly needed on Capit l hill. Common sense and a disinclination to talk without having something to say are merits for which the senate is not conspicuous. Whether or not Mr. Coolidge, as a senator, would add to the reputation he established as president is another question. There is a posibility that he would be smothered in senatorial verbosity before his colleagues felt the impress of his golden reticence. At that, a man of his wide experience and native determination of purpose could hardly fail to slow up the wheels that revolve so erratically in the average senator's brains.

There is no doubt that Mr. Coolidge, if nominated, would be elected Whether or not he would be willing to accept a nomination that meant giving up a well-earned repose for the hurly-burly of public life from which he has so recently escaped can not be so readily answered. Once before there was talk of drafting him. Only a high sense of public duty is likely to induce Mr. Coolidge to return to the melee. Any attempt to force him into involuntary servitude to partisan interests would risk being met by another "I do not choose to run," which he would adhere to, again, with the granite loyalty his Vermont hills have for their firm base.—Detroit Free Press.

Don't Be An Imitation.

Have you thought at times you would like to make some changes in yourself?

By comparison you can see that others stand out for one reason or another.

You believe that if you should conduct yourself more or less like one of these outstanding personalities you might improve on yourself.

And you may be right about it, at that.

You think that if you did not smile so easily and could act more sedately you might seem like better material for an executive.

You think you might fill an executive's position, if given a chance.

Perhaps you might be a successful executive but you would meet with little success if you molded yourself into the pattern of another man.

Perhaps it is your effort to be like other men whom you admire that has stood in your way.

By nature you are fitted for a certain place in the world.

Make the most of the talents that are yours.

"tydol gives us increased mileage, because it saves us from two to four gallons of gasoline each trip - - - - Mr. Than Simms, Motor & Transfer Co.

The Simms Motor and Transfer Company of this City own and operate a fleet of four large 2½ ton Indiana Buss Trucks.

Each one of these trucks makes a daily scheduled run of 150 miles or an amazing total of 54.750 miles yearly. A grand total for one year for the entire fleet of 219,000 miles.

In a fleet making this mileage, it is absolutely necessary that only the very best gasoline and oil can be used, and we are certainly proud that this company use TYDOL and VEEDOL exclusively.

Mr. Than Simms owner of this fleet says:—
"We were astonished to find that since we started using TYDOL that we were using from two to four gallons less on every trip on each truck. This means quite a saving over a year's time when the amount of gasoline we use is taken into consideration."

Here is conclusive proof Mr. Automobile Owner, right from one of our fellow townsmen that TYDOL will and does give you increased mileage.

If you've never tried TYDOL, you owe it to yourself to do so at once, because increased mileage is just one of the many advantages you receive thru its use.

Pottery City

Week By Week

With Apologies to O. O. McIntyre

Not many years ago it was the wont of East End inhabitants, that is a number of them who were in the secret, to determine the coming of springtime not by the prevalence of boys playing marbles, the discovery of budding trailing arbutus or even the sight of a robin, but by the recognized "chug-chug" of a giant frog, which supposedly, held forth in the east bog of Babb's island.

This was a super-frog in size, it was declared. And he had a stentorian manner of expression. In musical terms he is "chug-chug" was of a deep basso.

And this frog "chug-chug" became distinctive with the years until it could be detected above the shrill, shortened efforts of the younger specimens.

Like a famous Chicago editor who had as one of the tenets of his paper: "We will say it when the Associated Press says so," those knowing of the giant frog on Babb's island would prepare to discard their heavy underclothing for B. V. D's only when he had designed to quit his winter silence with the well known "Chug-Chug."

Newspaper men "covering" East End were duly told of the yearly first hearing of this frog, for his appearance to several was a looked-for event. In the silence of the night it was to many a comforting solace to hear this "chug-chug" reaching the Ohio side through the Spring darkness. There was something reassuring in it.

The frog went far in contributing to the changes of the seasons. For, it was declared, though he ushered in the gentle spring with his cheery "chug-chug," his silence in the frosty nights of the early fall was a sign that the time was not far distant when flakes of snow would cover the ground and the coal bins should be filled once more.

What became of this giant, boat-siren-rivaling-voiced frog? It may be that ripe of years he succumbed naturally. He may have elected to change his abode, having tired of his weather prognostications. But whatever happened to him there was a time when his "chug-chug" was an important voice in his section of East Liverpool.

Among the last things that the late State Senator Harry Carpenter, of Steubenville, did before his passing a few weeks ago was to take his competitor in the November race, Former State Senator Earl Lewis, of Cambridge, into the senate chamber and there formally ask that he be permitted to address his former associates and those more recently elected. Though an almost unprecedented departure the motion was agreed to, whereupon Mr. Lewis addressed the members. Though both made a vigerous campaign for the office which the veteran Steubenville legislator won, the contest did not mar the friendship existing between the two which discloses a situation that is wholesome and one not always found in the political world.

Not in years have snakes in and about East Liverpool been out so early as this year. The torrid weather of the last few days has had that unusual result. Boys went forth Sunday afternoon over the hill sides and found reptiles that had been numbed all winter in holes in the ground, wiggling slowly about as they sought the warmth of the sun.

Along the river between here and Wellsville, one party of lads stopped at a spring and while they were drinking saw a garter snake in the water. They poked around and found several others.

With the snakes reaching the surface, cat fish in the river began biting which fact fishmen hereabouts, after a winter of inactivity, were not slow in governing themselves accordingly. There are more cat-fish in the stream this year than for some time in the past.

Short Talk by a Thoughtful Mother.

An Indiana mother tells this: "We find nothing to compare with Foley's Honey and Tar Compound for coughs and colds. My little lad had trouble with his bronchial tubes from his third year, but since we started giving him Foley's Honey and Tar Compound we have been able to control it. We know there is nothing to compare with Foley's Honey and Tar Compound." The very name tells a story. Good also for croup (spasmodic) and troublesome night coughs. Ask for it. Faith Defenders Here been presented before. We all believe that new truth will ever break forth from the word of God. But when it comes it will not by any means be modernism.

Defends Fundamentalism.

"Fundamentalism" may represent a small fanatical group who overemphasize certain features of the Christian faith and insist on interpretations of the Bible which may be very properly called fanciful and irrational. On the other hand, fundamentalism in its broader aspects as representing evangelical Christianity, definitely means those who accept the Bible at its face value, the gospel of Christ as a reality, Jesus Christ as the Son of God and the atoning works of our Savior as indespensible to eternal life.

"Modernism is a term which has come to have a very particular significance in religious relations. It stands for a certain type or thought and a certain group whose words and actions are very conspicuous. The dyed-in-the-wool modernist who wants to be known as such, throws into the scrap heap the lines of thinking represented by the advocates of evangelical Christianity, and substitutes in their place man-built and unproved theories."

George Toland

Today has a double significance for Desk Sergeant George Toland, who has been in the service of the city for more than 21 years, for he is celebrating his fifty-third birthday and twenty-fourth wedding anniversaries.

Toland was born near Fredericktown, March 30, 1876, a son of John and Sue Toland. He came to East Liverpool 32 years ago, and learned the trade of a sagermaker at the Potters' Supply company plant. He was appointed fireman and patrol driver by Mayor S. W. Crawford on March 1, 1908, but resigned in July, 1911. On December 2, 1911, Toland was appointed patrolman by Mayor Crawford, then serving his second term.

Toland was appointed desk sergeant by Mayor V. A. Schreiber on May 23, 1914. He was named captain by Mayor W. F. Orr on December 8, 1916. He resigned from the captaincy in September, 1921, returning to the desk sergeant place.

He was married on March 30, 1905, to Miss Pearl Coolidge, a daughter of the late Thomas Coolidge, for many years a butcher here.

He is a member of the Fraternal Order of Police, the father of one daughter, Mrs. Naomi Drane, and lives in West Sixth street.

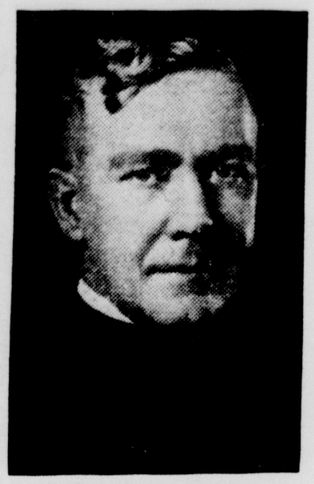
Catholic Charities Drive Opens April 21

Bishop Joseph Schrembs.



Rev. C. H. LeBlond.

East Liverpool Will Aid Campaign in Behalf of Homeless Boys and Girls.

East Liverpool representatives will join with 6,00 other workers in the Catholic Charities week campaign which will be launched in the diocese of Cleveland on Sunday, April 21. Every Catholic in the city will be asked to join the Catholic charities corporation. Membership dues, as well as all donations, will be used for the continuance and broadcasting of charitable work sponsored by the corporation.

In letters to East Liverpool members of The Catholic Charities corporation, Bishop Joseph Schrembs, Chairman of the Board of Trustees, urges a doubling-up of membership. He believes a membership of at least 70,000 is possible before the end of the canvass.

Bishop chrembs has expressed the hope that the funds to be raised will hasten the taking of all homeless Catholic girls to Parmadale, where facilities now permit only boys to be cared for. Later on, the homeless aged of the diocese also will be cared for at Parmadale.

Membership in The Catholic Charities corporation, an organization of laymen, chartered under the state laws, and unique in church annals, is so arranged that any Catholic, regardless of income, may join. "A membership to fit every purse" is the slogan. Yet every member, no matter what his contribution, has a personal share in all that the corporation is doing.

Parmadale and other Catholic orphanages of the Cleveland diocese last year cared for more than 1,800 homeless boys and girls.

The campaign is thoroughly organized to cover the 14 counties of the diocese. Each of 219 parishes comprises a unit, with the pastor as leader directing a group of laymen, with lieutenant and workers. The canvass will begin at the same moment throughout the diocese, and reports of the result will keep filtering back to headquarters of The Catholic Charities corporation in the Guarantee Title building, Cleveland. Thomas K. Maher, is president of the corporation, and Thomas Coughlin, vice-president. The Rev. Father C. H. LeBlond is director of charities for the diocese.

Tourney Field Narrowing As Cage Meet Moves Toward Finals

"Y" Squad Upsets Steelers

Pitt Wins Pair; Ashland, Geneva Colleges Victors.

After battling until 2 o'clock this morning in a procession of basketball games that had a thousand or more fans who attended the opening sessions of the fourth annual Tri-State tourney cross-eyed and leg weary from watching the pass and dribble experts, surviving teams resumed play today in second and thir dround contests leading to the semi-finals and final tonight.

Semi-finals are scheduled for 7:30 o'clock, consolation finals at 10 p. m., followed by the first flight finals.

From 8 to 12 this morning and from 1 to 5 this afternoon the incessant basketball warfare waged on two courts, the auditorium and the Y. M. C. A.

Out of an entry list of 44, last night's milling had reduced the field to 28 survivors.

Two squads, the "All Chumps," East Liverpool, and the Farrell (Pa.) Elks, were forced to forfeit their opening games last night as a result of failure to appear at scheduled playing time.

There were few surprises, if any, unless the Trotter Chevrolets' narrow squeak in their game with the Truscon Diamonds of Youngstown could be called such. Led by Charley Hyatt, national collegiate cage star, supported by Wrobleski, Cohen, Arturo, Miller, Zehfuss, Ferrero and other stars, the Pitt passers first defeated the Canton Hardwares, largely a collection of former McKinley high stars, and then nosed out the Truscons in their second round struggle.

The Artfield Drugs, Beaver Falls, or, in fact, the Geneva college quint of the Tri-State conference, led by Tony Paulsey, who has directed the Campbell Merchants to two tournament championships in previous years, appeared on the court in the closing game of the opening session against the Wellsville Mortland Zippers and won easily, 47 to 3, showing plenty of stuff for the stiffer competition which they are bound to meet later on.

One of the most pleasant events of the night, as far as East Liverpool followers are concerned, was the starting victory of the East Liverpool "Y" Five, composed largely of high school stars, over the Youngstown Eagles, regarded as a strong contender.

The local youngsters ran up a 40-17 score against the Mahoning countians.

The Sherer Soda Grills, Canton, led by Dave "Lefty" Miller, former Mt. Union star, and directed by Rex. McConnell, formerly of East Liverpool, showed strength in disposing of Farrell (Pa.) Tigers.

All of the college quints are still in the running, or were before noon today, arguing a classy brand of competition before the day is over.

PYLE'S PRANCERS HOP OFF SUNDAY

NEW YORK, March 30.—This city will be the starting point tomorrow afternoon at three o'clock of the second annual trans-continental foot race from New York to Los Angeles. An international field of more than one hundred distance runners drawn from all parts of the globe will be sent on its way by the starter on the 5,500 mile Jaunt across the country.

"Barnes Day" In Houston.

HOUSTON, Tex., Mar. 30.—The Detroit Tigers stopped off here today on their barnstorming trip homeward to play a two-game series with the Houston ball club of the Texas league.

Today is "Barnes day" in Houston, in honor of Frank Barnes, Houston southpaw, who will pitch for the Tigers against the local club. Several Tiger regulars who have been out because of illness or injuries, are expected to get back into the lineup today.

High Basketball Lassies Prove Gameness

Middle—Williams, Grumet, Steffaan, Johnson, Moon.
Lower row—Huss and Cochrane.

WATEVER might be said of Miss Iva Miller's high school girls' basketball squad, it must be maintained that the Blue and White lassies are game, courageous and real fighters for the Ceramic city school.

It is easy to play when winning, but when adversity crops up, as it will to the best team now and then, the real test comes. The locals have not had a spectacular season but have more than proved their fighting qualities against many of the best sextets in eastern Ohio.

Miss Catherine Steffan, a veteran of several campaigns, captained the squad during the season just ended.

Wrigley Swim Events Given To Cleveland

CLEVELAND, O., Mar. 30.—The $25,000 Wrigley swimming marathon will be held this year in Lake Erie, off Edgewater park in this city, on condition that Clevelanders agree to underwrite $35,000 of the expense.

City Manager William R. Hopkins made this announcement today and expressed confidence that a committee already selected, will succeed in raising the $35,000 pledge. All other obstacles to bringing the event here have been removed, according to Hopkins, who has been conference with representatives of William Wrigley, Jr., of Chicago, sponsor of the swim, for the past several days.

Tentative plans have been made to hold the women's marathon Sunday, July 21, and the men's race the following Sunday. Stands will be erected in Edgewater park and the course, about two miles and a half around, will be within sight of these stands.

The women are to swim 10 miles and the men 15. Hundreds of the foremost men and women marathon swimmers are expected to compete in Wrigley's third annual long distance event.

Loughran Short On Cash End

Gets Mere $15,000 While Walker Collects $50,000.

By Gene Hoffman.

CHICAGO, March 30.—Tommy Loughran, with his light heavyweight crown still intact, but with very little money in his jeans, will evacuate the Chicago war zone today for his home in Philadelphia. Tommy spent the hours before train time trying to answer the question, "when is a winner not a winner?"

He devoted 40 minutes of his time Thursday night to the formal opening of Paddy Harmon's spacious new stadium, during which he beat off the assault of Mickey Walker, middleweight champion, who coveted Loughran's 175-pound title. Tommy did that to the satisfaction of both judges and a majority of the 15,000 spectators, although Referee Davey Miller and a minority opinion favored Walker.

Today, after Tommy had received the check for his hire, he wondered vaguely who was right. And if one can be wrong when he's right, Walker, the challenger and official loser, received a cool $50,000; Loughran, the defending champion and winner, received a mere $15,000.

This was due to a trick financial arrangement whereby Loughran underwrote the success of the show and agreed to gamble on the drawing power of the match. The fans failed to storm the box office in the best approved Rickard fashion and the gross gate was barely enough to satisfy all the guarantees and expenses. It is estimated that when Tommy pays off his manager, trainers and seconds and defrays all camp expenses, he will be lucky to have carfare back to Philly.

The show was also a keen disappointment to stadium officials, who had hoped for a sellout and a gross gate of $300,000. The actual receipts were only $186,000, which left a net profit to the stadium of less than $25,000. If the show had been a sellout, Loughran's share would have been in excess of $75,000. The champion refused to be consoled by the $25,000 cash "bonus" paid him in advance, because he argues that was for signing a year's contract with Harmon and binds him to more fighting here, perhaps at a loss.

Mac Smith Set To Beat Down British Jinx

Off to Muirfield to Compete in Open Tourney.

NEW YORK, March 30.—Will Mac Smith be able to beat the champion ship jinx this season?

The Scot, now on his way across the big pond, is hoping that when he returns to the United States in May he will have to account to the customs for an extra piece of baggage—a little silver cup, more or less rococo in design and of little material value. Yet to Mac it will be worth all the gold in the Treasury, for it will mean that he will have broken through the championship jinx which has haunted his footsteps since he came to this country two decades ago.

When you watch the Carnoustie man swing a club, you marvel that he doesn't walk away with every title in the world, bar none. But that championship complex, from which no divot-digger is ever really free, has kept Mac from the blue-ribbon class, even when it didn't seem posible that he could fail to win.

Still Dangerous.

When Mack tees up at Muirfield early in May, in quest of the British open title, will the ghost of that disastrous 82 he took at Prestwick walk along the fairway with him? If he can wipe that score out of his memory, Mac will be a dangerous man in that field, the fastest in the golf world.

Smith must have had many a nightmare over that 82. Think of it—needing 78 to win the British title, and taking 82 to finish fourth! That was Mack's portion in 1925. It would seem that a 78 for a master golfer such as Smith, should have been simple under any conditions, but Mac, with his nerves jumping and his teeth on edge, simply couldn't stand the gaff of having twenty thousand golf-mad spectators push him and maul him all over the course.

They say that in sportdom they never come back. Well, Mac did. He came to this country in 1908, a gangling youngster with a thick Scotch burr (from which he has never parted), and basked in the reflected glory of his brothers Alex and the late Will. The Smith boys had put the clan in the limelight by winning a pair of national titles, but it wasn't long before Mac made his bid for fame.

Fate had the cards stacked against him even then, for after finishing in a three-cornered tie for the national open at the Philadelphia Cricket club, he was beaten by his brother, Alex. Little Johnny McDermott was third man in the battle. Alex is the oldest of ten golfing brothers and he wanted to see the kid get along, but a national title was a national title and so he reeled of a 71 to win his second crown. McDermott was next with 75 while Mac, overcome by the occasion, added up an inglorious 77. It was a tough dose for him to swallow—a kid of nineteen!

Creates Sensation.

It doesn't seem as though Mac has ever been able to get over that beat-trict titles of allk inds by the prostitle of all kinds but faced the prospect of a national championship some thing snaps. In 1914, he created a sensation by winning the metropolitan open with an amazing low total of 278, exactly nine strokes ahead of the second man, Will Macfarlane, national title holder in 1925. That score, made over the Scarsdale course, was never equaled until last Summer when Tommy Armour rang up his 278 at Shackamaxon.

Mac drifted westward a few years later, and for some time he disappeared from the golfing firmament entirely. Stories drifted back from California concerning the golfer, who was waging what seemed to be a losing fight. But the Smith clan is a hardy one—and in 1921 Mac startled the world by coming back strong at Columbia, where his score of 299 was fifth.

Today Mac's mental state is perfect He is comfortably fixed, has a grand job at the Lakeview Golf and Country club, and if ever fortune is to smile on him, Muirfield is the place, and 1929 the time.

College Grunt Squads Clash In Columbus

Oklahoma A. and M. May Repeat as National Champ.

COLUMBUS, O., March 30.—Approximately 25 college wrestlers representing college and universities throughout the country, entered the final matches of the National Intercollegiate Wrestling tournament at Ohio State university here today, having successfully survived the semi-final rounds yesterday.

In the team championship, Oklahoma A. and M. seems to have more than an average chance to repeat as national champion. As a result of yesterday's bouts, the highest scoring teams stack up as follows: Oklahoma A. and M., 3; Michigan, 5; Ohio State, 2; Nebraska, 1; Oklahoma U., 1; West Virginia, 1; Mechanics institute, 1; Wisconsin, 1, and Illinois, 1.

Teams wining matches by falls are credited with one point, which accounts for the above scoring. The final scoring of teams cannot be tabulated until the final, second and third place matches are competed tonight.

In the heavyweight division, Butch Fairall, Ohio State's best grappler, by scoring a fall over Leo Draveling, Michigan football player, in 8 minutes, 45 seconds, in the semi-final bout last night, earned the right to meet Edward McCready, Oklahoma A. and M., class champion, in the final heavyweight bout tonight. McCready defends his title after scoring a fall over Hepple, of Western Reserve, in two minutes and six seconds.

"Bootleg" Golf Ball Appears

Jackrabbit Being Blamed Again for Low Score.

By Davis J. Walsh.

NEW YORK, March 30.—Competitive golf has gone bootleg!

This was the innuendo in circulation behind the scenes today as golf officials checked over returns from the winter tournaments and discovered that low scoring is being figured somewhere in the decimal table. The intimation was that a little stepbrother of the "jackrabbit," which so agitated the ball field a few years ago, had been smuggled up the backstairs into competitive golf, although the officials failed to use exactly those terms. What they really said was that they understood the ball manufacturers "had found a new substance" that insured greater yardage. What they really meant was that a "bootleg" or "rabbit" was at large somewhere on the premises.

The "rabbit," just to keep the record balanced, is a ball that seeks the dim and distant horizon when smote or smitten upon the countenance and, if the boys have their story right, its appearance would account for an epidemic of low scores this season such as tournament golf never before has known.

It doesn't account for the fact that, when better scores were made young Mr. Horton Smith, of Joplin, Mo., made them. The only possible explanation of his conduct is that Mr. Smith merely was better than his field, irrespective of whether dynamite or doughnuts went into the making of the ball they happened to be using.

However, they don't mind saying that, when a medal score of 290 for 72 holes was liable to finish in a desperate, tri-cornered tie for 22nd place, they don't think there was any powdered sugar on this doughnut. Powdered, yes; sugared, no. That's their anecdote.

I can't say that it is altogether implausible, either. Something, indubitably, must have happened when quite a few golfers suddenly and for no rational reason began under-shooting themselves by fifteen to twenty strokes on their four-round totals. Consider Bill Mehlhorn's 271 in Texas, an average of 67¾ strokes for each round he played. Maybe the course lacked something of actual championship dimensions.

Sixty-nines on individual rounds were a commonplace; four rounds at an average pace of 72 barely succeeded in getting one nowhere. One flew into a vulgar rage if he acchieved par. The funny thing was that, barring Mehlhorn, none of the old guard could play with the pace. Smith, famous now but obscure at the season's outset, spread-eagled his field nearly every time out. Tom Rakiets, another comparative unknown, came through once in Florida while Ed Dudley, who is just getting good, almost stole the show at La Gorce.

What of Hagen? He was well known in the money most of the way, although he didn't start often. Johnny Farrell, national open champion and always a sound medalist, scored not wisely but too often. Tommy Armour, former National champion, got going at Pinehurst but Smith's 67 in the third round—his first daily with sand greens, by the way—had Thomas licked. Sarazen blew himself to a rather indifferent winter season, too.

The answer? You may search my portfolio. Surely, it cannot be that they didn't patronize the right bootlegger.

Rookie Swats Homer.

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla., Mar. 30.—Estel Crabtree, rookie, from Columbus, Ohio, walloped out a four-ply swat in the sixth, scoring one ahead of him, which permitted the Cincinnati Reds to beat Montreal of the International league in an exhibition game here yesterday, 5 to 4. The Reds take on the Buffalo Internationalists here this afternoon.

Forbidden Door

Story of Adventurous Youth, Mystery, Fortune and a Girl.

By Herman Landon

The butler executed a cramped bow, for he had grown old and rheumatic in the service of the Martenets, and withdrew. Ernest Mallingham was alone in the room that had been Winthrop Gaston Martenet's library. A large room it was, culttered with stronge curios from many lands, most of them neither useful nor decorative, yet holding certain charm for delvers into the quaint and bizarre. Only Winthrop Gaston Martenet, erratic and tireless explorer into the mysteries of life could have massed together such an astounding collection of odds and ends.

"Old Winthrop's junk shop" was what Mallingham called the room. He had adopted this sneering designation partly as a matter of self-justification, for he was secretly a little ashamed of the morbid fascination the library held even for him. Old Winthrop had been dead these seven years, yet the room had never lost the mystical flavor of his personality. It hovered over the huge redwood writing desk, it was ingrained in drab tapestries and unsightly bits of statuary, it lingered in the shadows that were never wholly dispelled by the light of day.

It was a strange, vital and dominant personality, and Mallingham resented its hold upon him. This revolving ball of clay, for instance——

He paused in his wanderings over the room and with a dry and twisted smile contemplated Old Winthrop's handiwork, a white-and-blue globe suspended between antlers of steel and representing the revolutions of the earth upon its axis. Very slowly, at a pace scarcely perceptible to the eye, the ball was rotating. On it fell the red light of a hooded lamp which might have been abducted from some joss-house altar. Just now it was illuminating the outer edges of the sprawling continent of Asia. By and by the peaks of the Himalayas would be dipped in the shimmer of dawn.

The Old Scientist's Mysteries

The practical sense of Ernest Mallingham was baffled. The fact that the ball was only a trifling thing, one of the many quaint conceits which Winthrop Gaston Martenet had devised while resting from more serious labors, did not ease his bafflement. For all any one could see, it might be propelled by the same cusmic force that caused the earth itself to pursue its eternal voyage through the ether. But that was, of course, preposterous. It did not satisfy the materialist in Mellingham. His feelings were those of a small boy toward his watch; he wanted to pick the thing to pieces and see what made it move.

It was strange that, though Old Winthrop had been dead for seven years, nobody had ever suggested doing such a thing. People seemed reluctant to pry very far into the heritage of secrets which the erratic old scientist had left behind him. It was almost as if they feared to profane Old Winthrop's memory. Consequently nobody had ventured to expose the mechanism that made the globe revolve. It as Mallingham's firm conviction that a mechanism of some sort there must be. At one time he had thought that the supporting column, firmly rooted to the floor, might contain hidden wires which connected the sphere with the electric current in the house. But this theory had been shattered one night when there had been a mishap to the power plant which plunged this section of the city into darkness. Mallingham had chanced to be a visitor at the Martenet house that night, and he had received something of a shock upon discovering that the ball was still pursuing its infinitesimal whirling motion.

He fixed a half-resentful, half-humorous gaze on the sphere. Old Winthrop, a man long since dead, seemed to mock him with this wraithy contrivance of his. It was a sensation at once ridiculous and inescapable. Well, some day he would strip the mystery bare, and then he would probably laugh at the disgusting simplicity of it all. But not now. Julia Martenet might not like it, and it was just as well to humor her in trivial matters. Besides, he would have plenty of opportunities to gratify his curiosity later.

With a shrug he turned away and fell to pacing the floor. He was a large man, six feet tall and broad of shoulder and chest, yet he moved with a gait that was curiously light. There was the faintest tinge of gray in his black, crisp hair, which waved upward in a way that suggested the leashed impetuosity of the man. His features were dark, regular and impassive, but, now and then there was a hint of mystery, of subdued drama in the slow flickers of the cold, gray eyes.

"Julia is late again," he mumbled, after a glance at his watch.

The Woman of It

He stood at the window, looking out over the East River, its muddy expanse spangled with the lights of a grotesque variety of craft. It was a curious location for a home, and especially for a home as large and pretentious as this; but then Winthrop Gaston Martenet, who had bought the ground and built the house, had always done curious things. The revolving ball was only one trivial sample of his variegated activities and erratic imagination. Yes, a man of queer impulses and strange deeds. And some of those impulses and deeds seemed to live after him. It was sometimes a little difficult to realize, even after these seven years, that Old Winthrop was dead.

An impatient chuckle escaped Mallingham. As always on his visits here, the atmosphere of the house was exerting a demoralizing effect on his nerves. The air was charged with a strange quality, something which the senses could not grasp but which formed distorted pictures in his imagination. Would it be possible to persuade Julia Martenet to leave her father-in-law's house and move into less depressing surroundings? This place, with its somber memories and dreary associations, was not a fit habitat for a young and vivacious widow—and a deucedly charming woman into the bargain. It was a mystery to Mallingham why she had not escaped soon after the death of her husband, Old Winthrop's only son. It could not be that she was detained here by bonds of sentiment. Julia was not the sentimental kind. Mallingham recalled how buoyantly she had rallied from the shock of her husband's death. And today, he was certain, Maxwell Martenet was only a pale memory that recurred but rarely in the widow's thoughts.

For that matter, Maxwell had been the type of man doomed to early oblivion. His personality, unlike that of his eccentric and picturesque father, had been obscure and colorless, the kind that fails to impress itself on others and makes no appeal to the imagination. Whereas Winthrop Gaston Martenet had departed from life with all the clamor and brilliance of an exploding rocket, the passing of his son a few years later had been like the fading out of a film. The father had stamped his personality on every one and everything within reach; the son had been the neutral type of man whom one can meet a thousand times and instantly forget. Small wonder, then that Julia Martenet had borne her widowhood so lightly.

Her Late Husband

Mallingham could not reflect upon the fates of the two men without a sense of philosophic irony. Seven years ago the elder Martenet had died a tranquil and undramatic death in his bed, yet his passing had been like the climax of an epic. The death of his son Maxwell, three years later, had been surrounded by many strange circumstances which in the case of any other man would have created a sensation. There was even room for speculation as to where and how he had died. There had been a few mysterious hints, but they had been dropped quickly.

It had simply been impossible to conceive of Maxwell Martenet coming to a dramatic end. The dull and unheroic character of his life had silenced in advance any suspicion which might have arisen after his death. He had not been of the stuff that dramatic figures are made of.

Mallingham had often wondered about these things. He had wondered, for instance, whether Julia Martenet knew more about her husband's fate than she had diuldged. He had no real reason for believing that she did, but the thought came to him now and then. He had almost resolved to put the question to her bluntly some day. Julia had been Maxwell's second wife. His first wife had died some twenty-five years ago, a year or two after the birth of a son who was still living and who, it was said, possessed many of his grandsire's characteristics and none of his father's.

FOILED!!
Outthought by Andy Gump Ausstinn who disappeared during the wild commotion at the church when Joe Carr made his sensational charges has been found —
Leave it to old Roxy Andy Gump - the old brain working all the time — his two day vigil has been rewarded - Andy figured that Ausstinn, a crook, would have his get-away money planted - He caught him as he was leaving the safe-deposit vaults — got it by selling stock, financing themselves in the open market, instead of borrowing.

"CLASS A" commercial paper is as rare as white blackbirds.

If the Federal Reserve should drive the public out of Wall street, it would be a bad thing for banks and worse for industries, now able to finance themselves, if they have good reputations and records, by stock sales.

SENATOR McNARY, head of the committee on farm relief, asks John D. Rockefeller jr., Henry Ford, Charles M. Schwab, J. P. Morgan, Paul M. Warburg and Owen D. Young to give advice.

That interesting collection of farmers would probably tell the farmers first of all to organize their business, eliminate lost motion and time, including an hour and a half for the hired man to harness and unharness the team. But Rockefeller, Schwab and Young decline to advise. Morgan is in Europe. The farmers will have to work out their problem.

BIG oil men of America agree definite plan for prevention waste and reckless competi... Sir Henri Deterding, manager and rector of the Royal Dutch-Shell, ... of British Standard Oil, promises ... per cent co-operation. What it will amount to remains to be seen.

EUROPE also reports that United States Steel plants will combine with European steel companies in a sort of international trust to regulate prices and other things.

ONCE, in the good old "muckraking" days, this country swooned and then had fits about a poor little trust amounting to a billion dollars. It chopped that trust, Standard Oil, into tiny pieces. Now each piece is worth a billion.

The trust fever has gone down, and men can talk calmly about a trust to include all steel plants in the United States, and plants across the ocean. "We first endure, then pity, then embrace."

LEO MAXSE, editor of the London "National Review," has a program for Britain's salvation.

Mr. Maxse suggests that Great Britain stop paying installments on the money she owes Uncle Sam. The good excuse offered being, "We have discovered that America uses our annual tribute to build battle cruisers."

That's almost as bad as the king of Crete, using the annual Greek tribute of youths and virgins as lunch for the minotaur.
